Project Case Study: Armagh City, Banbridge and Craigavon Local Authority Action Plan

Armagh City, Banbridge and Craigavon Borough Council's Local Authority Action Plan is supporting a number of projects, initiatives and events across three themes: Children and Young People; Shared Spaces and Services; and Building Positive Relations as means to develop and promote community relations, respect, diversity, active citizenship and working to improve people's quality of life.

The Action Plan aims to promote positive relations and mutual understanding; contribute to reduced levels of prejudice, hatred and intolerance; develop a sense of civic pride among participants and help develop good relations within communities.

"Jacob (Stockdale) is doing this on his days off. He is very keen to do the right thing in helping to build positive relations through sport and he doesn't seek any kudos for it. Lurgan is a very polarised town. The overriding aim of our PEACE IV project is to reach the hand across the community, particularly through young people. Although Lurgan Rugby is the lead club, we're engaging with local Gaelic clubs Eire Óg and St Peter's. We have a sport like rugby which is played on an All-Ireland basis and we have an individual who could make it into a world XV team on our doorstep and who is willing to turn up at school events. It is just fabulous."

“Creative writing has proven to be a powerful medium in bringing people together to engage with one another, build trust and mutual respect, as well as gain a greater appreciation of each other’s diverse backgrounds. Through this course, we have eroded pre-conceived ideas and dismantled prejudices.”

Tony Kennedy, Chairperson of the John Hewitt Society (delivery partner)

Participants from the Once Alien Here creative writing course at the concluding event and launch of their publication. This project has enabled 50 participants of all ages, beliefs and backgrounds to come together and explore issues of identity and cultural belonging through the written word.
