Youth Network for Peace will engage approximately 10,000 young people who care about creating change, and in changing attitudes and behaviours across Northern Ireland and Ireland.

Social action; research & insight polls; youth-led dialogue events; and conventions will all form part of this dynamic network.

At the heart of the project is an online radio station and social media channel, which will be run by the young people themselves.

Called Radio YNP, it will feature weekly content which is both unique and informative, highlighting young people's issues and aspirations. Aiming to engage young people on both sides of the border the station will feature live music sessions, political debates and blockbuster reviews.

"The Youth Network for Peace, through its 13 cross-border partners, has been reaching out to young people in local communities to build positive relations through a range of inspiring activities including Youth Bank; Radio YNP; Dialogue events; Campaigns and Social action initiatives. The focus on nurturing the visibility of young people in shaping decision-making and peace-building remains at the forefront. As well as building relations across the region among young people the project is further building relations across the partnership in developing new synergies and possibilities. A committed movement of young people and peace activists through youth work continues to rise and grow."

Martin McMullan - Assistant Director - YouthAction Northern Ireland

Young people and staff from Radio YNP meet with young leaders from the EU road-trip project - a European Commission campaign aimed at young Europeans (18-24). This campaign involves young European travellers meet with other young influencers across Europe.
